Entertainment Extra by Evelyn

Q. Is it true that Cher is planning on a return to network television next fall? Tim G.

A. The versatile lady is returning to television next year, but only for one special and not a weekly series. The special, no air date as of this writing, will be on CBS-TV.

Q. How is actor Jack Klugman? I heard that he recently underwent surgery. Mae H.

A. Jack had cancer surgery last year on his throat. The actor says he feels fine, and that his career is far from over. While his acting roles may now be limited, he says that he is healthy, and if anyone needs a whisky-voiced gangster-type, he's ready. From the surgery, the 70-year-old actor lost one vocal cord.

Q. I really like Tina Turner. Could you tell me about her? Jere R.

A. The former Annie Mae Bullock (she was renamed Tina by ex-husband Ike after a movie jungle heroine; she didn't like it) is 50, from Nutbush, Tenn., the daughter of Floyd Bullock, a sharecropper, and his half-Cherokee wife, Zelma.

Her parents split up when she was 11, and her mother moved to St. Louis; her father, eventually, went to Chicago. She and her sister Eileen were shuttled between relatives. At 16, she and her sister rejoined her mother in St. Louis, where, in a rhythm and blues club called Club Manhattan, she first saw Ike Turner and his group, the King of Rhythm.

She'd always liked to sing — at picnics, at the local Baptist church — but now she jumped onstage and sang along with them. It was the beginning of a long, successful, but very messy relationship with Ike, whom she later married, in 1962.

Publicly, the Ike and Tina Turner Revue was a big hit in the '60s, into the '70s, both onstage and on record. Privately, and sometimes not so privately, however, the marriage was marked by violent fights (leaving her with bruises). Ike's drinking and drug use and infidelities, extended to the point of moving one of his mistresses into their house and onto their payroll.

Finally, in 1976 after a particularly vicious fight which left her face, as she explained it, "swollen past my ear," she left him in Dallas. She had 36 cents and, in the following years, hundreds of thousands of dollars in debts from their canceled bookings. But over a nine-year stretch, she paid them back by working Vegas lounges, McDonald's conventions, anything.

Then came a change in management, and the "Private Dancer" album, sold-out concert tours, television endorsements and motion pictures, and the rest, as they say, is a Hollywood history success story.

Q. How does Ryan O'Neal really feel about his son-in-law, John McEnroe? Page A.

A. Ryan gets along very well with John, and Ryan understands John's sometimes temperamental behavior. Besides, Ryan adores his daughter Tatum, and whatever makes her happy, makes Ryan happy as well.

Q. Is Burt Reynolds joining the cast of "Designing Women" as a semi-regular like Hal Holbrook, Dixie Carter's real-life husband? Please answer this question as soon as you can, because I am a devoted Burt fan and was crushed when his series, "B.L. Stryker" was cancelled. Thanks. Lisa V.

A. No, Burt is not joining "Designing Women." However, I think I know where the idea came from. On a recent TV entertainment news show, one of the reports dealt with Burt having talks with Linda Bloodworth-Thomason, the creator of "Designing Women." The fact is, the talks related to his starring in her newest comedy series for CBS, "Evening Shade." The show, also starring Hal Holbrook (surprise!!!) and Elizabeth Ashley, will debut this fall.

Q. Has Johnny Carson chosen the person who will take his over his show once he leaves? Doreen G.

A. The heir apparent used to be David Letterman. At least that's what most folks thought until Jay Leno began racking up the good numbers as Johnny's permanent on-air substitute star.

Q. Is there a book that proves that Arnold Schwarzenegger was a Nazi? Edith U.

A. There's a book out that states that Arnold's father was a Nazi sympathizer.

Q. Will there be a sequel to "Dick Tracy?" I have a bet on with a friend that they've already started one. Can you find out anything about this? Jennifer H.

A. Warren Beatty is said to have nixed the suggestion. However, nothing succeeds like success, and that nothing is more certain of being sequelized than a successful film. So let's not act too surprised if one does turn up in the future.

Q. A recent program on President Kennedy's life mentioned a sister who had to be put away. Is this true, and has it ever been discussed publicly? Angela F.

A. Yes, and yes. Rosemary Kennedy, one of the eight children born to Rose and the late Joseph P. Kennedy, was mentally retarded, and although Rose wanted to keep her at home with the rest of the family, her father felt she would do better in an institution. The Kennedys' involvement with mental retardation (the Special Olympics, training centers, etc.) comes out of their experience with Rosemary.

1 large red potato, peeled, cooked and diced
½ cup fresh mushroom slices
½ cup thin zucchini slices
¼ cup green onion slices
4 egg whites, lightly beaten
½ cup low-fat cottage cheese
2 tablespoons all-natural cheese flavored butter sprinkles, divided
⅛ teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes

Preheat oven to 350F.

In a 10-inch non-stick ovenproof skillet, combine olive oil, potato, mushrooms, zucchini and green onion. Saute until vegetables are crisp tender. Combine egg whites, cottage cheese, one tablespoon all natural cheese flavor sprinkles and red pepper flakes. Mix until blended. Stir into vegetable mixture. Bake at 350F. 10 minutes, or until set. Sprinkle with remaining one tablespoon cheese sprinkles; cover until they dissolve. Cut into wedges. Makes four servings.

Herb and Cheese-Stuffed Meatloaf*

1½ lbs. extra-lean ground beef (85 to 90 percent lean)
2 egg whites
½ cup finely chopped onion
1 cup soft bread crumbs
½ cup plus two tablespoons very low sodium steak sauce
4 to 5 teaspoons salt-free lemon & herb seasoning blend, divided
1½ cup low-fat, low-salt ricotta cheese
3 tablespoons parsley flakes
1 to 2 teaspoons low-sodium mustard, to taste

In large bowl, combine ground beef, egg whites, onion, bread crumbs and ½ cup steak sauce.

Into center of nine- or 10-inch pie plate, place inverted six-ounce custard cup. Pat ⅔ of beef mixture into a ring shape around custard cup. With back of a spoon, make an even depression in meat, all around the ring. In small bowl, combine ricotta, parsley flakes and three to four teaspoons Lemon & Herb Seasoning. Press into depression in meatloaf. Top with remaining meat mixture. Pat firmly and evenly to completely cover cheese mixture.

Microwave at full power (HIGH) five minutes. Pour off juices. Combine two tablespoons steak sauce and mustard. Spread evenly over meatloaf. Cover with waxed paper. Microwave at 30-percent (MED-LOW) 10 minutes. Rotate ½ turn; continue at 30 percent for eight minutes. Let stand five minutes. Cover with plate; pour off juices and invert to remove custard cup. Re-invert onto a large serving platter. Garnish with coarsely chopped tomato, green pepper and lettuce, if desired. Makes eight servings.

*Note: This recipe was tested in a 650 to 700-watt microwave oven. Bake in conventional oven at 350F. for 45 to 50 minutes.

DEAR DEX

by Dexter Dyer

DEAR DEX:

I'm a 34-year-old single man. For years, I've been grappling with emotional problems which required me to be on medication. Recently, I was able to stop the medication altogether. However, because of my problems, I was never really able to hold a job for very long. I also never had a long-term relationship with a woman.

Now that I'm getting my life back together, I find that women are not willing to give me a break. It's as though they're just interested in how much money a guy has, or what kind of car he drives. They don't really want to get to know the person. This is really getting me down. I just don't understand why women can't look beyond all that and just accept the person I am. Believe me, if I found a nice woman, I'd treat her like gold! Is it unrealistic of me to expect to meet someone nice, or are most women shallow and greedy?

DISCOURAGED

DEAR DISCOURAGED:

It's certainly not unrealistic to expect to meet a nice person. However, I do think you're being rather impatient. You just don't snap your fingers and say, "I'm ready, bring on the women!" Be willing to take the time and the patience to meet different women. You will eventually find someone with whom you're compatible.

As for women being shallow and greedy, judging from the mail I get from lonely single women, that's just not the case. There are plenty of very nice women out there who just don't seem to be connecting with nice single men. So, get out and get busy! I'm sure you'll find someone who's right for you in time.

DEAR DIANE

by Diane Van Arsdale

DEAR DIANE:

My husband and I have separated three times in the past seven years, but we always seem to get back together. We have a really crazy marriage and strange sort of friendship. When we're separated, he always finds another woman to spend time with. I, on the other hand, usually sit around and try to figure out what went wrong again, and usually end up figuring it's worth another try, until now. I have found someone and am enjoying this man. I'm really beginning to love him as much as I loved my husband when he and I were first married. I've decided to file for divorce, and now that I have, my husband is hounding me to change my mind. I sometimes think I should give this another chance, but then wonder what would be different from the other three times. The new man in my life is so happy that I've filed for divorce and is looking so forward to a future with me. I hope you can point me in the right direction. I read your column all the time, and I think you give great advice.

CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED:

You haven't told me what your specific problems are, but I see a very destructive pattern in your marriage. It seems that when you separate, your husband takes it as an opportunity for a "vacation" from his commitment to you and marriage. This is immature and self-indulgent on his part, to say the least.

I honestly feel that if you were to go back to him, nothing would change. The only difference right now is another man in the picture, which is making your husband jealous. Once you gave up your new friend, your husband would resume his behavior. Thus, my advice is to make a new life for yourself, and good luck.

Antiques and Collecting

by Ralph & Terry Kovel

HAIR CARE COLLECTIBLES

Hair and hairstyling have been important since ancient times. The well-to-do tried to stay in style, so most needed the help of a barber or stylist and special accessories. A folding mirror that would enable one to see the front as well as the back of the head was used in Victorian times. Shaving mugs, brushes, combs, scissors, tweezers, curling irons, razors, mustache trainers, fancy cologne bottles and many other hair-care collectibles are all popular items.

Enthusiasts with more space now want the floor-standing beauty parlor hair dryers that were made before 1950. Old barber chairs are also very collectible. Theme collections are becoming more common as people are searching for historical items that relate to their jobs or interests.

Q. I have a sideboard in the dining room and decided to put a tall knife box on each end. It was an idea I got from seeing an oil painting of an old dining room. I just purchased a pair of English 18th-century knife boxes and now I find my knives will not fit inside. How were these boxes originally used?

A. The tall covered knife boxes were kept on the sideboard. Some were rectangular, while others were shaped like large urns. The boxes were partitioned to hold knives and forks. The early silverware was made in different proportions from today's, and often a modern knife and fork will not fit. Silverware was not stored in drawers in the dining room until about 1820, and this is when the knife box went out of style.

Q. Is there any way to know what a fair price would be for an old television set? Are they still too new to be listed in price books for collectors? I own seven now and want to buy more, but my wife is afraid I am paying too much.

A. Like any collectible, the fair price is what is decided between the buyer and seller. It does help to see a few prices that other people have paid. The only list we have seen is a 28-page pamphlet, "1990 Price Guide to Vintage TV's and Collectable Radios" by Harry Poster and John Sakas. (P.O. Box 2224, S. Hackensack, N.J. 07606; $10). TV sets from Admiral to Zenith are listed. Some are worth over $2000.

Paint & Household

by Bob D'Angelo

Q. My kitchen ceiling has eggshell type cracks, and I'm unsure if primer alone will fill them before I paint. I wan to avoid spackling if I can. R.L.

A. I don't blame you. Spackling can be a problem if you're not practiced at it. There are several new products, such as Spackle-Lite or Red Devil One Step that can be added to latex primer that will successfully fill small cracks such as you described. If you choose this method, be sure that the compound is stirred and free of lumps before rolling it on your ceiling or wall.

If, on the other hand, the cracks need to be filled the conventional way, I would suggest opening them up first with a sharp tool such as a can opener, and then cleaning the cracks out with water. When it's completely dry, use a slow drying oil primer and spot prime the cracks. Fast drying primers have a tendency to contract and crack. The primer will form a seal so that when you apply the compound, the moisture won't get sucked into the crack.

Use ready-mix wallboard compound and a six-inch broad knife. Keep the application thin. Then, when it dries, you can easily sand it.

Q. I have foil wall covering, and want to put wallpaper over it. Since removing the foil is difficult, if not impossible, my question is, will the colors of the foil show through the wallpaper? K.W.

A. I don't know enough about wallpaper to give advice, so I asked my friend and associate, Casey Bank, to bail me out. First, wipe the area with a liquid sandpaper to get the gloss off. Certain precautions should be considered when using liquid sandpaper. Gloves and eye protection should always be worn, and the work area should be well-ventilated.

The second key is to use two coats of heavy pigment opaque primer to completely cover the foil and prevent the colors from bleeding through.

Q. Please advise me on the best method for removing moss from asphalt roof shingles. W.N.

A. Generally speaking, I would recommend powerwashing to remove moss and mildew from your home. However, I am somewhat apprehensive to advise you to use a powerwash on asbestos roof shingles. Powerwashing on a pitched roof may cause the shingles to lift as the water under extreme pressure may inadvertently get underneath the shingles.

You can soak the affected area with household bleach, wait a few minutes, and then hose the roof down with water. We have a telescopic powerwash wand that extends to 40 feet, and that, coupled with a rather gentle tip, has successfully accomplished removing mildew from roofs. If you choose to have the roof powerwashed, this is the route I would follow.

Home hints

SWEET-SMELLING DISPOSAL — Toss some lemon, orange or grapefruit rinds into your garbage disposal. The grinding action will produce a fresh scent. Mandy T., Arlington Heights, Ill.

STAIN LIFTER — If you spill red wine on your carpet, cover the stain with baking soda. Leave for a few minutes until absorbed. Then, vacuum. Club soda also works well. Regina B., Yuma, Ariz.

REMOVING WAX DRIPS — To remove candle-wax drippings from fabric upholstery, place a brown grocery bag over the spot and run a warm iron over it. The paper will soak up the wax. You may need to repeat with fresh paper until the wax has disappeared. Cynthia P., Woodbury, N.J.

DISHWASHER TIP — If your dishes aren't coming out clean, you may need to clean your dishwasher. An easy way to do this is to put powdered orange or lemon drink in the detergent cup and run the dishwasher on its normal cycle. Barbie W., Tallahassee, Fla.

FOOT THERAPY — I work as a cashier in a retail store. On busy days, my feet get very tired. When I get home, I treat my feet to a special foot soak.

I pour some baking soda in a pan and add warm water, put my feet in, and enjoy a few minutes of relaxation. This makes my feet feel pampered, and as an added benefit, the soak softens the rough areas. Annie T., Dillsburg, Pa.

SEASHELL — I found that a large flat seashell makes an ideal soap dish. This is especially handy for me since my bathroom doesn't have any soap dishes mounted on the wall. Gloria B., Rochester, N.Y.
